Sample Grants 1997-98

Women in Solidarity in Haiti (SOFA):

In April 1998, armed uniformed Haitian police destroyed a women's health clinic in Port-au-Prince looking for weapons supposedly smuggled in with medical supplies. The attack came at a time when right-wing forces influential in the police department were trying to intimidate community organizers in anticipation of upcoming elections. Despite hundreds of calls and letters of protest clinic doors were padlocked and no action was taken against the police. The Urgent Action Fund made a grant to help SOFA mobilize women around the country to demand justice and re-open the clinic. More than a thousand women marched in a show of solidarity in Port-au-Prince and the clinic was re-opened.

Center for Women War Victims/Croatia:

Following a televised presentation by five women's rights groups about the increase in domestic violence in Croatia since the war, a well-known journalist attacked the activists in a State-owned newspaper calling them "traitors, witches" and "Serb sympathizers." The groups used a grant from the Urgent Action Fund to file individual lawsuits against the paper and the journalist, and to launch a campaign against sex discrimination in the media. This is the first lawsuit of its kind in the Balkan region.

International Needs/Ghana:

As compensation for the crimes of family members, young women and girls are given as slaves to fetish shrines in the ancient practice called Trokosi. Over the past eight years International Needs Ghana has worked to eliminate the practice by educating families, working for national legislation, convincing fetish priests to release the girls, and providing rehabilitation services. As pressure mounted for legislation to be signed into law, 18 priests agreed to release 115 women. Money from the Fund helped to pay for rituals conducted by the priests to reassure families and communities as the women were released.

NOTE: The Urgent Action Fund has made grants that cannot be publicly described to protect the safety of the individuals involved. Several of these involve violence or threats of violence because of sexual orientation.

Advisory Network

The Urgent Action Fund relies on the advice and recommendations of trusted friends and colleagues throughout the world who assist with the distribution of information about the Fund, identify potential grantmaking situations, advise about grant requests, outreach efforts, and the needs and priorities of women in their areas of expertise.

URGENT ACTION FUND for Women's Human Rights

Purpose

The Urgent Action Fund, a global network of women and men committed to a world of equality and social justice, provides immediate financial support for unanticipated and time-urgent opportunities to advance the human rights of women within the context of the Beijing Platform for Action.

Focus

The focus of the Urgent Action Fund is the human rights and full participation of women in:

- Areas where armed conflict has recently occurred or where there is a significant threat of armed conflict.
- Closed environments where women's freedom of movement and access to information are severely restricted by government policy or customary laws.
- Unusual breakthrough opportunities that may emerge in areas outside our focus.

Response

The Urgent Action Fund responds to most requests within 72 hours.

Only requests endorsed by members of our broad global network of trusted friends and colleagues are considered.

Grants are provided in support of individuals or groups but must be transferred through non-government or religious organizations.

The Urgent Action Fund does not provide grants for general humanitarian support or emergency relief. The Fund will consider requests for protection of individual women's human rights defenders in leadership positions who are threatened because of their activism.

The Fund makes grants ranging from $100 to $5,000 US.

Applying for a Grant

Requests may be made directly (by phone, fax, or email) or through individuals and organizations in our advisory network. Requests received without endorsement may require additional response time. Formal proposals are not necessary, however, the request should include the following information:

1. Name of the group who will accept responsibility for the grant including the name of a contact person, address, telephone, fax and email numbers.
2. The amount requested and how the funds will be used.
3. A description of the urgent opportunity, of how the grant will be used to take advantage of the opportunity, and, most important, of how the grant will support a broader strategy to advance the rights of women in the region or globally.

Criteria

Requests meeting the following criteria will receive consideration by the Board:

- The request is strategic, that is, related to a pre-determined strategy or plan to advance women's human rights or equality.
- The request is unanticipated and time urgent demonstrating that if funds are not allocated quickly the opportunity will pass.
- The request shows that other funding is not likely.
- The request represents a defining issue, event or opportunity for affecting structural change that will advance women's human rights.
- The request demonstrates the grantee's flexibility in a rapidly changing situation.
- The request has the support of others involved in the women's human rights or related fields locally, globally or both.
- The request demonstrates the grantee's capacity to build from the opportunity.

Grants can pay for but are not limited to: legal support, media campaigns and public education, transportation, language services, emergency personal support related to the strategy. Brief reports are required.

This two-day conference will analyze, in a global context, key political, economic, and cultural issues confronting the Kurds and the region of Kurdistan at present and over the next decade. It will also explore processes of reconciliation among Kurdish groups and factions and coexistence between the Kurds and the peoples and states of the Middle East. Participants include scholars, policy makers, and journalists. The conference is presented by American University's Center for Global Peace in conjunction with the newly established Mustafa Barzani Scholar of Global Kurdish Studies.

"My dear [students], it is very well known to you that illiteracy is like a noose around a nation's neck. The wealth and rights of an illiterate nation can be easy prey for oppressors and greedy aggressors. Our nation has unfortunately fallen into such a threatening circumstance. Therefore, I am asking you to take up the arms of science and education and exert all your efforts to liberate your people from the bondage of illiteracy and to shoulder the burden of promoting your nation to the level of developed nations in the near future. This is the most sacred duty befalling you."

Three core topical areas will guide the research, course development, and program activities of the scholar: Kurdish history and culture in local, regional, and global context; reconciliation among Kurdish groups and factions; and coexistence between the Kurds and the peoples and states of the Middle East.

Purpose/Focus

The Urgent Action Fund was created in October 1997, to promote the human rights of women within the context of strategies outlined in the Beijing Platform for Action. The Fund's goal is to encourage structural changes resulting in the advancement of women's human rights.

THE FUND MAKES GRANTS IN FOUR CATEGORIES:

- Areas of recent or threatened armed conflict;
- Closed environments where women's freedom of movement and access to information are severely restricted by government policy or customary laws;
- Precedent-setting opportunities that may occur in any region of the world;
- Women's human rights defenders who are threatened because of their activism (effective January 1999).

History of the Fund

Since the UN Fourth World Conference on Women held in Beijing, China in 1995, women's groups worldwide have mobilized to translate the Beijing Platform for Action into local strategies and actions to improve women's daily lives. Watchdog groups have emerged to monitor and report progress and global communications networks are expanding daily to keep women in contact with one another and alert to opportunities to promote change.

The ability to respond quickly when new opportunities arise is an important part of the challenge that women face and a difficult one to finance.

To assess the need for quick response funding, Fund organizers spent nine months conducting interviews with activists and funders working throughout the women's human rights arena. Many reported money for unanticipated situations or opportunities is difficult to raise, and all agreed the cost of making small international grants quickly is high. A good opportunity or strategy, they said, is often rejected outright because it might not be fundable or the funding can't be raised quickly enough to respond. Interviews revealed that a significant number of these opportunities do not fit the criteria of most funders. Enthusiasm for establishing a quick response fund was overwhelming.

Results of the feasibility study were taken to individual donor activists. Their willingness to seed the project encouraged the co-founders to approach the Tides Foundation for sponsorship. In October 1997, in response to a story in the San Jose Mercury News about the arrest of 35 women victimized by an international sex-trafficking ring, the Urgent Action Fund made its first grant to the Global Alliance Against Trafficking in Women (GAATW), in Canada.

How the Fund Operates

The Fund is managed by a Board consisting of the three founders: Ariane Brunet, from the International Centre for Human Rights and Democratic Development (ICHRDD) in Montréal; Margaret Schink of the Shaler Adams Foundation and Caritas Fund in San Francisco; and Julie Shaw, formerly with The Global Fund for Women. Ms. Shaw serves as Executive Director providing day-to-day staff support. In June 1999, Indai Sajor, Executive Director of the Asian Centre for Women's Human Rights (ASCENT), will join the Board.

Relying on phone, email, and fax communication, the Fund takes requests through an informal network of activists and funders throughout the world. The Board responds to most requests within 72 hours; some may require additional review. The Fund is also pro-active, seeking opportunities to respond to an event or escalating situation. Grants are between $100 and $5,000 US and require minimal paperwork.

Our referral network includes: representatives from the women's human rights community; international human rights organizations; activists involved in refugee rights in the US and abroad; members of religious communities whose local missions are frequently the first source of support for women in the field; and health and development specialists. The Fund also accepts referrals from other funders.

Activities and Fundraising

The Fund made its first grant on October 1, 1997. Over the next 15 months, to the end of 1998, the Fund made 21 grants, supporting women in 19 countries.

Eighty requests and inquiries were received during 1997-98. We distributed over 300 brochures in English, French, Spanish, Russian, and Arabic. Three international networks shared our information with their on-line networks, and we have contacted another 31 groups after reading about their work on the Internet.

Core funding comes from individual donors, primarily women, who view the Fund as an opportunity to pool their resources for quick and efficient support to activists around the globe. Sixteen individuals contributed $136,326 between October 1997 and the end of 1998. These individuals also take an active role in reaching out to communities of interest. On two occasions individuals provided additional funds when our limited resources made it difficult to respond.

With introductions from individual supporters and from friends at The Global Fund for Women, the Tides Foundation, Resourceful Women, the Ms. Foundation, ICHRDD and others, we raised $105,750 from nine institutional donors. We are grateful to the numerous foundation staff who have helped to guide our efforts, have shared information about the Fund with their extensive overseas networks, and have partnered with us when our grant alone was insufficient.

In-kind support of staff and travel funds from ICHRDD enabled Fund co-founder and Board member Ariane Brunet to conduct outreach, to assist with fundraising and attend Board meetings in San Francisco.

Women's empowerment and their full participation...in all spheres of society, including participation in the decision-making process and access to power, are fundamental for the achievement of equality, development, and peace.

PROPOSAL FOR SCIENTIFIC EDUCATIONAL AND CULTURAL CO-OPERATION

Grants 1997-1998

The following summarizes some of the grants made during this period. Other grantee groups have requested confidentiality.

AREAS OF ARMED CONFLICT

HORN RELIEF/SOMALIA WOMEN'S PEACE INITIATIVE GRANT AMOUNT: $5,000

Escalation of clan fighting over territory and charcoal production rights threatens Somalia with resumption of civil war. Women from the region contacted the Fund for support of a campaign to demand a halt to the violence. "Someone has to step out and speak against unnecessary fights and expose the horrific experiences that women go through during such times." After a confrontation with the women "action was taken by the clan authorities who met to resolve the conflict. Peaceful charcoal trade agreements were reached and the confrontations subsided."

WOMEN IN SOLIDARITY IN HAITI (SOFA) GRANT AMOUNT: $4,000

As tensions rose at the prospect of upcoming elections, armed uniformed Haitian police destroyed a women's clinic in Port-au-Prince looking for weapons supposedly smuggled in with medical supplies. No weapons were found but the clinic was destroyed and staff and neighborhood women were terrorized at gunpoint. The Fund made a grant to help SOFA successfully mobilize women around the country to demand justice and re-open the clinic. "The campaign to re-open the clinic and to hold the police accountable has brought renewed recognition and strength to the women's human rights movement in Haiti."

CENTER FOR WOMEN WAR VICTIMS/CROATIA GRANT AMOUNT: $3,500

Following a televised presentation by five women's rights groups about the increase in domestic violence in Croatia since the war, a well-known journalist attacked the activists in a State-owned newspaper calling them "traitors, witches" and "Serb sympathizers." The groups used a grant from the Fund to file lawsuits against the paper and the journalist. This is the first lawsuit of its kind in the Balkan region. The activists have also taken their case to the Croatian Association of Journalists whose Court of Honor has condemned the journalist's action and the newspaper for publishing his article.

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION/ALBANIA GRANT AMOUNT: $1,900

The case of an Albanian woman, deported after being denied asylum in the US, became a test case of new procedures that deny asylum seekers full hearings unless they are able to quickly convince immigration officials that they face "credible fear" of persecution.

Iran Bends Its Traditions

By Arnold Belchman
Special Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Tehran, Iran (AP)—Premier Assadollah Alam of Iran said in an interview that his country is undergoing a revolution which has changed 2,000 years of tradition.

The statesman, a bohemian friend of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi who appointed him Premier last year, argued that the land-reform program and a profit-sharing scheme for urban workers will change the face of Iran.

"However, there are people who stand against the revolution," he said, "and because their personal interests are involved, resist the revolution more strongly. We must defeat this resistance to this revolution."

Elections Pledged

"For a long time, His Imperial Majesty planned and wanted that every Iranian should own something of his own—every peasant and worker and all individuals should own something even if it is a small house. By so doing, we could create a basis for real democracy. Until now, the Iranians knew they were working for a small group of people but from now on they will feel that something belongs to them."

The interview was at the Premier's residence in one of the mountain villages outside of Tehran.

Seated outdoors under a tent canopy of a beautifully decorated Persian rug, Mr. Alam responded to several questions concerning the state of freedom and human rights in Iran. He confirmed that the long-postponed elections would be held in mid-September and that the exact date would be announced shortly.

Since there are no political parties in Iran, still under martial law since the June 3-4 coup, would there be any competing candidates for parliamentary seats?

Police Check Noted

"I assure you," replied Mr. Alam, "the peasants and workers will have a big voice in the elections. The workers and the peasants will do the picking of the candidates and they will have competing candidates."

There were reports, fully confirmed, that the secret police some weeks ago had asked provincial branches to submit lists of names of reliable persons who could run for office. Would this inhibit a choice of candidates? Mr. Alam thought for a moment.

"I am checking by the post," he said, "to ensure that no Communist slip in as candidates. But the Communists are very weak here because the new Soviet policies puzzle them."

Whatever opposition exists in Iran today has been from the National Front, whose leader, Aliyavar Saleh, has been in jail since January. Why was he in jail without a trial or charges against him?

"The National Front leader," said the Premier, "has been close to the Tudeh (Communist) Party. It was organized with the help of the Tudeh."

Political Prisoners

Would Mr. Saleh be tried soon? he was asked. "That depends on the files already collected and completed," he replied. "He may come out before election."

How many political prisoners were now held in jail?

"There are very few political prisoners," said the Premier, "no more than 15, including the National Front."

Mr. Alam confirmed that Sadeq Bardsad, publisher of the now banned newspaper, the World, had been jailed in mid-June for an editorial. Earlier in the year, 75 newspapers and magazines were deprived of the right to publish. This had led to strong criticism that there is no freedom of the press in Iran.

"That is not the case exactly," Mr. Alam replied. "The people support the revolution. Even the most severe opponents of the revolution are unable to say a word against it. The press is free to criticize but they don't because if they did nobody would read their papers. The reason why the other papers are not publishing is because few of them had sufficient circulation."

Iran Land Reform Doubts

By Arnold Belchman
Special Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Tehran—Deepening concern is being expressed by knowledgeable Iranians that the much-touted land reform program, decreed by Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi in January, 1962, is all "public relations" sound and expropriated landlord fury with little prospective benefit for Iran's 16 million peasants.

These criticisms come from Iranian liberals, whose identification would jeopardize their freedom in this authoritarian land.

These Iranians, long opposed to the feudal land tenure system, are prepared to praise the Shah for having acted at long last against landlords who owned hundreds, even thousands of villages and thereby kept peasants in a state of virtual serfdom.

No Plan Seen
What actively troubles these Iranians, some of them government civil servants, is that the land distribution program was introduced in piecemeal fashion without the insurance of planning essential to insure at least as much food production as under the antiquated landlord system.

Specifically, it is asked, what mechanism now exists to replace the landlord's functions, which included supplying seed, fertilizer, pesticides, mechanical power, and marketing?

The government answer is that it is creating a system of multipurpose farm cooperatives as substitutes for the vanishing landlord. The rebuttal from critics is that a cooperative system demands a nationwide educational campaign to persuade an illiterate peasantry of the benefits of cooperatives, a Herculean task in itself.

Finances a Task
Even more essential is the question of financing the land distribution at a moment when Iran's economy is still trying to shake off a two-year-old recession.

Lack of funds is due to the tremendous expenditure by Iran on its military forces, which continues to rise despite United States pressure on the Shah to prune the Army. Military appropriations for the current year are $225 million, a 7 percent increase over 1962-63.

In fact, Iran has a tremendous financial resource—oil. Current production is breaking all previous records and its hard currency income from this one resource alone for 1963 is being estimated at $375 million. Instead of allocating this income to economic development or at least a substantial portion of that income into the government's plan organization, it goes to meet the military bill and the cost of maintaining a swollen and definitely inefficient bureaucracy.

On paper, it would appear that a large amount of oil money does go to the plan organization. $220 million for 1963-64. However, one-eighth of this amount—at least—has been set aside for what are definitely nonproductive projects.

These include construction of Army posts, military buildings, housing for the Imperial Guard and civil servants, swimming pools, a $10 million toll road from Tehran to Karaj where a perfectly good road already exists.

Training Difficult
Yet even if there were money for farm financing, Iran still lacks skilled personnel capable of administering a revolutionary land program of extraordinary complexity.

Iran has no farm extension program or trained "county" agents, necessary to instruct a peasantry which for hundreds of years depended on the management skill of a landlord or his local surrogate.

What has further contributed to disconcerting the land reform was the sudden and wholly unexpected resignation of Agriculture Minister Hassan Afsarian a few months ago.

"Stagnation" Charged
Whether it was because Dr. Afsarian was too ambitious or was becoming too popular is not publicly known. What is known is that his successor, General Riahi, has said quietly that the program is now "stagnating."

Land reform critics fully realize that overnight alterations in age-old national institutions are impossible even with the best will in the world. What they plead for—but in vain since the country is still under martial law, the aftermath of the June rioting, and there is no free access to press and other communications media—is either that the government throw in all possible resources to bring some efficient organization into the land program or that it halt the program temporarily, so that there can be time to catch up with what has become a runaway mess.

5. The Kurdish border is a red & green gate which is locked. A young Kurdish guard runs to unlock gate. Once the gate is unlocked, our cars from Suleimani came across to meet our Kirmanshah PUK Toyota pick-up. Adel Murad is met and goes ahead. My car picks me up drives me just across the border where I meet two senior faculty members from Suleimani University who will accompany me to the city.
6. We pass by the road to the "Maidan?" area where in the mountain borderlands some 20-25 million land mines were planted by Iraq during the Iran-Iraq war (1980-88).

PROPOSAL FOR SCIENTIFIC EDUCATIONAL COOPERATION

1. University of Toronto is Cooperating with the University of Suleimani in Southern Kurdistan
KurdishMedia - Apr 5, 2000

By Saïd KAKAYÏ, Kurdish Media Analyst

TORONTO, (Kurdish Media), April 5, 2000, Professor Budd L. Hall, Chair of the Department of Adult Education - Community Development and Counselling Psychology at the University of Toronto and the Vice-President of International Council for Adult Education, has set the stage for cooperation between the University of Toronto and the University of Suleimani.

At a Slide Presentation called "MIRACLE from the MOUNTAINS", held on April 03, 2000 at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education of the University of Toronto (OISE/UT), Professor Hall, who has recently returned from a visit to Southern Kurdistan and the University of Suleimani, asked his audience, approximately 100 people, do their best in helping the University of Suleimani.

Professor Hall, despite of his loss of voice and extreme illness, has spoken about the endless efforts of the Kurds of Sileimani to build their educational institutions since the liberation of Southern Kurdistan from the grips of the bloody dark age forces of the Iraqi regime in 1991.

Briefing the attendees about the modern history of Kurdistan, Professor Hall related that Kurdistan is a mountainous region located in the heart of the Middle East and unjustly divided between Iran, Iraq, Syria and Turkey early in the 20th Century. He then related that they have been found to be in odds with the geopolitics of the region, the Kurds of Kurdistan, estimated at 25 millions, are the largest nation in the world without their own country.

Professor Hall furthered that for the past 50 years, the Kurds have been subjected to massive displacements, destruction of thousands of their villages, chemical bombing, and the laying of more than 25 million land mines within their territory. He pointed out that the gassing of Halabja town by the Iraqi regime in 1988, which had resulted in the instant death of more than 5,000 Kurdish children, elderly, men and women in 45 minutes, is an unspeakable crime against humanity, so is its then infamous campaign of Al-Anfal that has resulted in the disappearances of more than 184,000 innocent Kurdish, children, youth, men and women. It is worth to mention that Professor Hall had read a strong poem, written by himself, for Halabja, and KurdishMedia would publish it whenever it receives it.

Thereafter, Professor Hall emphasized the importance of the mountains to the Kurds as their heavenly place to live and get protection whenever the dangers arise to get them. He then talked about beauties of the Kurdish cities in the foothills of the mountains, reflecting the richness of Kurdish culture and folklore. Professor Hall finds the city of Suleimani to be the centre of Kurdish cultural and intellectual traditions for many years.

Professor Hall related that the University of Suleimani was established in 1968, after decades of Kurdish struggle for autonomy within the boundaries of Iraq. He stated that, in 1981, the Iraqi government (Saddam Hussein's regime) had turned the campuses of this university into military facilities to fight the Kurdish Liberation Movement on the one hand and on the other, to humiliate the Kurds of Suleimani. However, after the Gulf War of 1991 and the subsequent Kurdish Uprising, the people of Suleimani were able to clean up Iraq's military mess and, in 1992, had re-established their University of Suleimani, added Professor Hall to his statement.

In spite of a double embargo imposed on the people of Southern Kurdistan; one by the United Nations, for considering them as part of Iraq, and the other by the Iraqi regime for braking away from its grip, Professor Hall explained that the people of Suleimani have been able to run the affairs of their university miraculously.

With slides to document his claims, Professor Hall stated that the University of Suleimani now is working hard to accomodate 4000 students in 12 different colleges, by which 50% of them are women. Then, he stated that the University of Suleimani, among other things, lacks essentials needs; books, resources and financial needs. He asked the attendees to do whatever they can to help this university that have been embracing the slogan of "MAY KNOWLEDGE THRIVE UNDER THE PROTECTION OF FREE AND DEMOCRATIC KURDISTAN."

To the end of his presentation, Professor Hall asked his audience and the Kurdish community in Canada to involve in the cooperation committee between the University of Toronto and the University of Suleimani. Also, he revealed that a Student Exchange Program have been designed between the two universities and urged those who are interested to partake.

Ending his presentation with many thanks to Dr. Amir HASSANPOUR, Research Associate at the Department of Near and Middle Eastern Civilizations - University of Toronto, for masterminding this cooperation and Dr. Shahrzad MOJAB, teaching the subject of Workplace Learning and Change, Adult Education Program at the OISE/UT, for her endless efforts in supporting his mission to Kurdistan, Professor Hall, due to his illness, had excused himself from taking questions and left the panel for Dr. MOJAB and Dr. HASSANPOUR.

For their turn, Dr. MOJAB and Dr. HASSANPOUR, both have provided a wealth of information about the situation of the Kurds in Kurdistan and the circumstances of which the University of Suleimani in going through. Also, they explained how the cooperation committee between these two universities would pursue its agendas.

Finally, if you would like to learn more about this topic, or if you would like to get involved with this noble mission, please write to Professor Hall at the e-mail address of

Hear about the opportunities for collaboration with this "miracle from the mountains."

The speaker has recently returned from a visit to Iraqi Kurdistan and the University of Suleimani. The city of Suleimani in Kurdish Northern Iraq has been a centre of Kurdish cultural and intellectual traditions for many years. For the past 50 years, the Kurds of this region have been subjected to massive displacements, destruction of 4000 of their villages, chemical bombing, and the laying of 25 million land mines within their territory.

In 1992, the citizens of Suleimani re-established their University after it had been turned into a military facility by the Iraqi government. Today the University of Suleimani has 4000 students in 12 different colleges. They are in the process of starting a new Free University as well to provide opportunities for thousands of women and men who have been excluded from studying because of successive generations of violence and troubles.

The Day After

The sun's rise has never been so brilliant
Threads of gold woven through pastel scarlets
The brightness of the light diamondizing the sea
Before me

The day after
The day after two commercial aircraft
Turn back towards their makers
Guided by men driven mad by mission

The day after
The day after 5,137 women and men are killed
The same number as were killed in Halabja
A different time, a different cause

The day after
The day after women and men and boys and girls
Weep for their parents, their lovers
Their friends

Leaves of the Oak trees in the garden
Turn so slightly towards the sun
Not responding to the power of the star
But receiving its gift freely as it is given
Life for Life

The Director ,
Uppsala University

Dear Sir,

The University of Salahaddin, which is located in the town of Erbil of Iraqi Kurdistan, has not properly and progressively developed with time for the last 12 years due to Iraq-Iran war (1980-1988) and then the other Gulf war of Iraq-Kuwait which caused further damage to the University. In fact this applies, although to different extents, to the other Iraqi universities, but, while these received good attention of the Iraqi authorities later on, the University of Salahaddin was totally neglected from November, 1991 and even its regular yearly budget and all its micro-wave communications were cut from the beginning of 1992. Furthermore, the boycott by the Iraqi government on Kurdistan region of Iraq has resulted in further problems to the University. It was cut off, not from Baghdad only, but from the whole world. This is why the University has no choice, if to be saved, but to look for foreign support. In fact such support is given, in other aspects, to the Kurds from different governments and international organizations after the Kurdish uprising in spring 1991 and the revenge by the Iraqi army to the uprising later on..

Having this in mind, the University thought of enhancing its bilateral cultural relations and cooperation with other universities and other scientific organizations outside Iraq. This is the reason of sending you this letter which I hope to receive your due consideration.

These bilateral cultural relations and cooperation may include;

- 1- The exchange of;
  - Scientific and Technological experience.
  - Scientific and other publications.
  - Student groups for training.
  - Teaching staff
- 2- Joint research work.
- 3- Mutual attendance of conferences and other scientific activities

In fact the above points are given as rough guides only to the areas in which the cooperation may take place for the benefit of both sides. For example, scholars and/or teaching staff from your University may spend periods from a few months up to one year, according to point 1 above, in the University of Salahaddin to do their research work in the fields of Near-Eastern studies such as; Languages, Literature, History, Religion, Anthropology.. etc. for which the University of Salahaddin is a good research area by itself, meanwhile, they can teach our under-graduate students the subjects of their specializations. On the other hand, our scholars and/or teaching staff may benefit from your facilities of high technology in various aspects of different branches of sciences.

These points can be further discussed and amended accordingly. For this purpose, and for discussing the financial aspects, which are very important, I may suggest that a visit should be arranged by inviting an authorized person, or delegation, from one university by the other one in the coming future.

Looking forward to hearing from you,

Sincerely Yours

THE PRESENT SITUATION

- THE ANALYSIS
- THE SHORTCOMINGS
- THE ALTERNATIVES

Project Evaluation (relationship of mutual support between UFR and University of Salamanca, file 1 of 2)

B2023-0005/001 (02)

The institutions of higher learning are concerned with the study after the secondary stage, including higher studies (Master's and PH.D.), in addition to a variety of other concerns such as scientific research, the service of society, adult continuing education, technology transfer, scientific conferences and other social and cultural activities.

The institutions of higher learning existing at present in the governorates of Arbil, Sulaimaniyah and Duhok are the University of Salahaddin in Arbil and the Technical Institute in Arbil, the Technical Institute in Sulaimaniyah and Technical Institute in Duhok. These four institutions used to represent a part of the institutions of higher learning in Iraq (ten universities and thirty-three Institutes run by the Ministry of Higher Education and Scientific Research, in addition to a number of other state and private colleges and universities) before the recent developments in the autonomous region of Kurdistan. Therefore, in the past the issues of "absorbing capacity" and "availability of colleges and scientific departments for the various specializations" did not represent a problem for the three governorates where the distribution of students upon acceptance in the Iraqi universities and institutes was centrally performed. The student was able to obtain a seat in the other universities and institutes in the country when that seat was not available in those four institutions due to either absorbing capacity or availability of the required specialization. The neglect of the Ministry of Higher Education and Scientific Research in Baghdad for these institutions and its cutting-off of all material support-including the regular budget-for them from the beginning of the present year (1992) has burdened these four institutions with great responsibilities toward the youth who are about to complete their secondary education and want, once they are so qualified, to pursue their desired field of study according to their qualification in the University or the Institute.

In order to face these grave responsibilities, these four institutions must reconsider the following three inter-connected points:

- 1- The absorbing capacity of the University and the Institutes.
- 2- The provision and the completion of the specializations needed by society.
- 3- The provision and the completion of the requirements of the other activities such as scientific research, service of society and adult continuing education, etc.

1-Absorbing capacity:

The principal factor that sets the absorbing capacity that must be available in the institutions of higher learning in the region is the number of secondary school graduates every year who want to pursue their University (or institute) education. The statistics of the Education Offices in the three governorates point to the fact that this number is around six to seven thousand students annually, and consequently, the absorbing capacity of the institutions of higher learning ought to be around twenty-four thousand seats, on the basis that the years of study in the colleges of the University are four academic years (excepting Medical College where they are six years and colleges of Pharmacy and Dentistry where they are five years) and three academic years (two calendar years) in the institutes and when considering absorbing capacity as divided evenly between the university and the institutes (which is an acceptable percentage at the present time) we reach the conclusion that the absorbing capacity of the University must be around 12 thousand seats and that of the Institutes must be also around 12 thousand seats. Table, no.1 (appendix-1) explains the absorbing capacity of the four institutions at the present time and points clearly to the necessity of raising this absorbing capacity, and in a gradual fashion, during the four coming years, 1992-1995, in order to reach the required level. The ways and means of raising the absorbing capacity of the institutions of higher learning are many, but those most suited to the present time are the following:

- 1.1- The addition of new buildings (lecture halls and laboratories) to the existing departments and colleges in order to raise their absorbing capacity.
- 1.2- The opening of new colleges in the fields of specialization not available at present like the Colleges of Dentistry, Pharmacy, Veterinary Medicine, Agriculture and Religious Studies, thus making the college-based structure of the University complete and comprehensive also, the opening of other Institutes not available at the present time, like a Technical Agricultural Institute, an Applied Arts Institute, a Communications Institute and a fine Arts Institute.

Project Kurdistan (Relationship of material support between UFR and University of Sulaimani, file 1 of 2)

B2927-0000/001 (03)

1.3- The extensions of the colleges existing at present in the University of Salahaddin in Arbil in the form of new colleges in the other governorates, that may be linked administratively to Salahaddin University (at this stage), and may also become nuclei for the formation of new universities in the governorates of Sulaimaniyah and Duhok.

1.4- The opening of another University either in Sulaimaniyah or Duhok.

1.5- Running the standard courses of any college, or department, whenever possible, twice a day i.e. for two groups of students in the same buildings and the same available facilities. One group from 8.30a.m. to 1.30p.m. and the other group from 2.30p.m. to 7.30p.m. thus doubling the absorbing capacity of that College or Department.

2- The provision and completion of the specializations needed by society:-

The dependence of the three governorates on the institutes of higher education in Kurdistan undoubtedly makes the opening of new colleges and new institutes and new departments in the existing colleges and institutes, in the fields of specialization that are not available at present, an absolute necessity. At the college level, the following colleges of higher education are not available at the present time:-

- Dentistry.
- Pharmacy.
- Veterinary Medicine.
- Agriculture.
- Fine Arts.
- Political Sciences.
- Languages.
- Religious Studies.

And at the Institute level, the following institutes are needed in addition to the existing institutes

- Agricultural Institutes.
- Technical Institutes specialized in Applied Arts.
- Petroleum institute.
- Microwave and Telecommunication Institute.
- Computer and Electronics Institute

Finally, the departments that are not currently available at the colleges and the institutes are as follows:

- a- The College of Engineering: The departments of Architecture, Mining Engineering, Petroleum Engineering, Chemical Engineering, Advanced Technologies and Electronic Computers.
- b- The College of Education: The departments of Kurdish, English, History and Geography.
- c- The College of Science: The departments of Electronic computer, and computer science.
- d- The College of Arts: The departments of French, Oriental Languages, Archaeology, Philosophy, Libraries, Translation and Media Information.
- e- College of Administration and Economics: The departments of Hotel Management and Tourism and Secretary Training.
- f- The Technical Institutes: The departments of Pharmacy, Radiology, Dental Industry, Road Building Technology, Irrigation and Water Projects, Company Management, Banking and Computer System, etc.

3-The provision and completion of the requirements of the other university activities:

In addition to the role of the University and the Institutes in teaching at both levels, first degree as well as higher degree courses (there are no higher degrees in the Institutes), the other important role of these institutions is to keep up with course of scientific and technological advance, to contribute to it and to apply its results in the process of the growth of society through scientific research, social service, adult continuing education, technology transfer, scientific conferences and many other social and cultural activities. Activating this role and raising it to the level required needs several things, the most important of which are the following:

- 3.1- Founding Research Centers in the fields of specializations necessary for the service of society and in the light of the environmental, natural and economic conditions. In our estimation, the area needs research centers that study the following fields: (Agriculture , Forestry and Tobacco), (Mining and Mineral Wealth), (Petroleum), (Environment), (Dams and Hydro-Power), etc.
- 3.2- Establishing mutual cultural relations with a number of other universities, institutes and research centers in various parts of the world (the Arab countries, the neighboring countries, developing countries, Europe and America).
- 3.3- Activating the publication of scientific research, textbooks, translated books and other publications and developing the University Press.
- 3.4- Supporting the central library and the branch libraries through its active subscription in the international scientific periodicals and magazines and through supplying it with advanced technology, especially through linking it with the (International Information Bank) via satellite.
- 3.5- Supporting the computer center and its tributaries (terminals).

THE FUTURE OUTLOOK

Correct planning for the future of higher education in Kurdistan requires drawing up three plans: the immediate plan, the short-term plan which ends by the end of 1995 and the long-term plan.

The immediate and the short-term plan:

Although the University of Salahaddin and three Institutes used to suffer greatly from shortage of necessary requirements like buildings, spaces, laboratory equipments, machinery and service tools in addition to a great shortage of qualified teaching staff, technicians and (the regular budget) before the Kuwait war. What happened after that war and after the popular uprising that followed it in all of Iraq, and especially, in Kurdistan, was the total neglect by the Ministry of Higher Education and Scientific Research, from the beginning of 1992, for these four institutions, which made the shortage of these requirements bigger and more complex. Consequently, the immediate and the short-term plan must deal, first of all, with the issue of these shortages by guaranteeing these necessary requirements that enable these four institutions to return to their normal condition and accept numbers of students in accordance to their regular plan and on the basis of those previous absorbing capacity, as well as guaranteeing other necessary requirements for rising their absorbing capacity so that they can take the additional 1750 students from the graduates of the secondary schools of the three governorates in the next academic year, 1992-1993. And this aspect of the issue must be dealt with in the immediate plan, the details of which become inter-connected with the short-term plan, i.e. up to the year 1995:

The immediate and the short-term plan

First- The guarantee of 1750 seats additional to the existing absorbing capacity of the four institutions and as follows:

- |   |           |
|---|-----------|
| A- Increasing the number of accepted students in the colleges of the university and the three institutes by 15% -25% whenever possible.   | 500 seats |
| B- Opening the departments of History, Geography, Kurdish Language and English Language in the College of Education, with 75 seats for each department.   | 300 seats |
| C- Opening new departments in the institutes and as following :   |           |
| -Road Building technology /Arbil/   | 80 seats  |
| -Medical Tests /Arbil/  | 40 seats  |
| -Surveying /Sulaimaniyah/   | 70 seats  |
| -Pharmacy /Sulaimaniyah/  | 60 seats  |
| -Accounting /Sulaimaniyah/  | 150 seats |
| D- Opening the College of Agriculture in the governorate of Sulaimaniyah, with the knowledge that there are buildings available, though in need of repair, that can take 200 seats.                               | 200 seats |
| E- Opening a new College of Arts in Sulaimaniyah that can take 200 seats for the departments of Kurdish and Arabic, considering that it is possible to find temporary quarters until a new building is completed. | 200 seats |

- F- Opening a college of Religious Studies in Duhok province where it is possible to find a suitable place until a new building is completed. 150 seat

TOTAL 1750 seats

Second- Completion of the shortcomings in buildings, other spaces, equipment, machinery and service tools for the University and the three Institutes, in accordance with the Appendix, No. 2, and 2.1 and 2.2.

Third- The teaching staff: Appendix, No. 3, clarifies the need of the University for members of the teaching staff who hold the Ph.D. degree, or its equivalent, in the various specializations, and also of the three institutes for members of qualified teaching staff taking into consideration the fact that it is possible to arrange a time-table for those who are on loan to work in the University or in the Institutes for periods of 4-5 months, that is the possibility of following the temporary or long-term loan system.

Fourth- The regular budget The regular yearly budget of the University of Salahaddin and the institutes, after the expansion that is expected to be accomplished in their absorbing capacity, is estimated as follows :

1- The University 1.6 million Us dollars.

2- The Institutes 1.8 million Us dollars.

The principal details of which are listed in Appendix No. 4.

Note

The preparation of this (immediate and short-term) plan takes into account that it is not feasible at present to think of opening new colleges and departments the nature of which demands building complex and expensive laboratories and workshops. These colleges and departments will be listed in the second part of the plan, the long-term plan .

Other Matters

1- Study Grants and Scholarships:

Due to the importance of the stability of the members of the teaching staff, it is imperative to obtain study seats for those members of the University who have been outstanding in their first-degree and masters studies, to pursue higher studies (for the ph.D. degree or its equivalent) abroad, through study grants and scholarships, and in the following :

2- Cultural Relations with Others Universities:

Due to the grave importance of bi-lateral, cultural relations with a number of Arab and foreign universities in the neighboring countries and in Europe, America and Southeast Asia, we emphasize the necessity of concern for this particular area that should include above all:

- 1- The exchange of scientific and technological experience.
- 2- Joint scientific research.
- 3- The mutual attendance of conferences and other scientific activities.
- 4- The exchange of professors.
- 5- The exchange of student delegations.
- 6- The exchange of scientific and other publications.
- 7- The granting of study seats.

We emphasize here, also, the necessity of the University's retaining its membership in the Union of Arab Universities and in the International Union of Universities and the payment of its annual subscription in both Unions.

University of Salahaddin requirment (formerly University of Sulaimaniyah)

1- Introduction:

The University of Sulaimaniyah was found in 1968. When in sulaimaniyah, it had attained a measure of success and progress since it could add to its buildings and labs, and establish contact with many universities throughout the world. With the transference of the University to Arbil an unjustifiable and unreasonable move it lost much of its equipments, furniture and laboratory apparatus and appliances. It was forced to use buildings not originally designed for University use but for primary, intermediate, nursing and comprehensive school buildings. The only fortunate college was the College of Engineering which took up the buildings intended for the Technical Institute of Arbil. The period following the transference was not propitious either. The University was entirely ignored and disregarded, its budget provisions being too meager and insufficient to compensate for its losses, because of Iraq-Iran war, and the worse conditions in the whole area, particularly in Kurdistan, in the wake of that war. There were no accommodations, in fact, no minimal requirements for living, in the dirty, over crowded buildings, where unreasonable numbers of students were forced to live in very limited spaces. This situation inevitably affected the students socially, and psychologically and reduced their academic performance and progress. Worse was to follow when even these accommodations were formally annuled later, leaving the students without homes in unforeseen, strained circumstances. There is no denying that the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and the events which followed in its wake also negatively affected the University which was already staggering. In the light of the preceding discussion, it is essential that due attention be paid to the University and rescued as soon as possible from its plight. The following report contains only the essentials that can fill the University needs for buildings, various equipments, books, periodicals, references, labs ...etc.

2- Requirements

2.2 Lab and Lab Equipments

The current labs, which the University uses at the graduate and under graduate levels and for scientific research are primitive, in most cases apparatuses and equipment of which are old fashioned or out of order because of lack of appropriate space and too much transport.

2.3 Miscellaneous Equipments:

These are many apparatuses which are out of order because of the circumstances of the University. There are others which were lacking at the outset. All of these are required for proper teaching to continue, and were requested from the State but the University could not provide them at time because of its circumstances or its meager or both. These include:

2.4 Computer

The University so far doesn't boast a real computer center. There was a dilapidated center containing old fashioned equipment of limited efficiency, most of which were out of order because of too much transport and limited space. Even these equipment were subjected to loss and damage during the events of March and April. There is an urgent need, therefore, for:

Description	Cost in U.S. Dollars x 1000
1- Computer Center with 10 Terminals	380
2- Personal Computers	100
Sub-Totals	480

2.5. Central Library:

There was a central library at the outset. When the University was in Sulaimania, the library had attained a measure of success. The transference of the university, and the storing of the books and periodicals in corridors, and inappropriate rooms and buildings for a long time because of lack of buildings, however have worked havoc and led to a great loss in books, references and periodical. It suffices to know that the library has been moved four times in six years!. The current needs of the library include :

1- Scientific books	475
2- Periodicals 330 3- Photocopiers	50
4- Microfilms	95
5- Shelves, books. ends. book-cases & other facilities	75
Sub-Totals	1425

2.6 Bookshop

The University boasts a bookstore which, like the library, has been moved to different places at different times, and has never stayed in a single place for a long time. The function of the bookshop is to provide textbooks, for college students, references and periodicals for the central and college libraries. There is now a serious shortage of text- books for all classes and colleges.

Text Books	400 x 1000 U.S. Dollars
Sub-totals	400

2.7 The University Press

The University had at the outset modest printing press which was used. The printing of its publications, bulletins, scientific journals textbooks and other books. Following its transport from sulaimania, however, the press was subject to damage and corrosion, its apparatus and equipment suffering a lot from bad storing conditions. The press was separated sometime back and linked directly to the Ministry of higher Education and scientific Research. The University now practically has no printing press of its own, the University, therefore, is in urgent need of an appropriate printing press to fill the needs of the University, and the area which lacks printing services.

2.8. Library Facilities

There is virtually no bureau for the teaching staff. The rooms being cramped, small and under-furnished, more often than not a desk is shared by two or more instructors. The furniture the desks, and the cupboards are worn badly in need of repair, broken, and kept to the minimum. Blackboards, head-projector, magic lanterns, slides ...etc. are also lacking.

Summit 2000 Children Youth and Media Beyond the Millennium

A Delegation from Kurdistan is Invited

Taking place May 13 - 17, 2000, in Toronto, Canada, Summit 2000 will draw some 1,500 delegates from around the world—professionals involved in the production and distribution of screen-based media: television, films, and computer software—for children and youth, and those involved in media education. Summit-2000's Conference Chair, Adrian Mills of the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. introduces the Summit as follows:

"Now more than at any other time, young people are being challenged to find their places in a world where there are few certainties beyond change. In the last century, the role of media in their lives has exploded, introducing new sources of information and entertainment, with new opportunities and expectations, and significant issues of equity... Next May in Toronto, Canada, producers and programmers, educators, technologists and creators in conventional and interactive media will join those who plan services, finance product development and manage the complex business of young people's media to focus on our collective future."

Participants in the conference will attend their choice of concurrently running conference sessions covering issues relevant to children youth in media and media education, as well as recent findings of communication, education, and media research. Sessions exploring topics such as "It matters who comes next: grooming talent for the next century", "Indigenous Media: Building Bridges", "Worlds in Collision: Perspectives on Globalization", or "The 3 R's of Media Literacy" are just a few of many that may be of special interest for delegates from Iraqi Kurdistan engaged in work to revive civil society structures for early childhood education and youth participation. Master classes will be offered to delegates in production, marketing, script writing, music, animation, and other areas of media work.

Summit 2000 has welcomed the participation of 3 delegates from Iraqi Kurdistan, and has offered to assist with the processing of visa applications. The Summit's Executive Director has also suggested that Kurdish delegates will be most welcome to present relevant issues and video or other media samples from Kurdish programs to the Summit, in an evening workshop session (45 minutes including time for discussion).

Funding to cover the registration fees and travel expenses of the delegates will need to be raised locally in Kurdistan (possibly from international organizations such as UNICEF or Save the Children, or from international donors and foundations. The International Relations Bureau in Washington DC will assist with the fund-raising process. An estimated budget per participant is as follows:

Travel from Suleimani to Toronto (4.5 days each way) and return:	$3,500
6 Days Hotel Accommodation in Toronto:	$1,400
15 days Expenses @ $100/day (meals, incidentals)	$1,500
Full Registration at Summit	$ 600
Visas and formalities	$ 400

Total: $7,400 per participant
3 participants @ $7400 = $22,200.

Shahzad — a delegation will come I believe to T.O.
in May
